Paulo Freire Week Activity – 10/09/2026

1) For me, being an active student in your own learning, even with AI, means being a student who—even though there are study methods that "simplify" your studying (while reducing your learning)—strives to do their best to solve things independently. An example of this would be submitting an assignment (like the one I am doing right now) without having an AI write it for you.
2) You can tell whether the AI is doing the work for you or if you are actually learning simply by checking if you were able to understand the material yourself and can complete a similar activity on your own.
3) Obviously, the one who can explain, verify, and defend what they did, because they made the effort to learn what was taught to them—unlike the other, who might have been lazy and simply plugged it into GPT (for example).

Made by Eduardo Koehler Oliveira